On the cover

While Star Wars fans wait for the new chapter in George Lucas' series, they can look forward to many new stories from comics licensee Dark Horse. Included in the anticipation-building titles is a new, ongoing series simply titled Star Wars. Matt Brady has the inside scoop on the publisher's other plans on Page 42. Before you get there, Star Wars writer Michael Stackpole visits with fellow writer Jan Strnad on Page 26. Elsewhere on this very contents page are details of CBG's own Star Wars contest, sponsored by Dark Horse, in which you can win all sorts of neat stuff before the movie's May release.

Was it really that long, long ago?

It was August 1976. When Valerie was turning 9 and Stephen was turning 4, husband Don and I (thanks to the kind offices of Shel Dorf) were Fan Guests of Honor at the San Diego Comic-Con. Being the parents of young kids, Don and I were deeply involved in swapping parental duties, and it was Don who had drawn the baby-sitting job that evening. I was going somewhere conward, when I came across Roy Thomas, who had come to the show in part to promote a new product with which Marvel and he were involved: Marvel's adaptation of a movie which wasn't scheduled for theatrical release for another nine months. Roy invited me to join him and introduced me to the film's promotions guy, Charlie Lippincott, as they struggled to put together the best possible slide presentation for the following day. There were slides all over the place, and, as the two worked, Charlie chatted enthusiastically about the Movie That Was to Be. The names were captivating; the slides (at least, as held to the light) were intriguing. This movie looked as though it could actually be a lot of fun.

And Charlie was working at fever pitch. He had to. The film was going to have to pull in as much money as the highest-grossing SF film made to that point. That would be just to break even. I saw to it that Don got to see the con programming devoted to the upcoming film — and he, too, was drawn in. The idea of a science-fiction movie in which the spaceships weren't all polished and new, the view of scenes in which a variety of aliens were taken for granted — and moved among themselves as if they'd lived together all their lives: These were welcome sights to long-time SF buffs like Don and Maggie. And we got to see more, all of it enticing. The following week, thanks to the kindness of fan friends John and Bjo Trimble, we visited Los Angeles — and found out more about Star Wars, this time in the Lucas offices (at Universal Studios, by the way). We looked through photos being kept relatively secret: The aliens' make-up was terrific — but there were concerns about letting outsiders see them, since a view of these creatures might lead the national audience to assume that Star Wars was going to be a monster movie .

Oh, and there would be a book: the novelization of the film. And, if Lucas was very lucky, there could even be a second book: The Making of Star Wars. There might even be some other licensing, if the film caught on, but that was a lot to hope for.

There have been changes. The saga and its technology have both come a long way since 1976. And, of course, so has the method of promotion. What was a novelty then is a sensation today; the project itself draws people to theaters to pay — just to see the promotional trailer! CBG Managing Editor John Jackson Miller points out that, for the first time (aside from some prior, non-Lucas-originating material), children now seem to be an important part of the ongoing story that has so captivated viewers old and young. But it's great to see one tradition continue: Comics are invited along for the adventure.

Win 'Star Wars' comics from Dark Horse

The folks at Dark Horse Comics have put together six prize packages of Star Wars comics, and we're offering them to six lucky CBG readers.

The grand prize, selected in a random drawing from all entries received, is a complete set of Star Wars: A New Hope Manga signed by Adam Warren.

Five runner-up prizes will also be awarded, and you can select the package you would like to win (only one selection per entrant). Winners will be selected from the pool of entries asking for the specific package. The packages are:

- Boba Fett: Battle of the Bounty Hunters pop-up book and the Death, Lies, and Treachery trade paperback.
- Droids: Droids and Droids: Rebellion trade paperbacks.
- Special Edition: Special Edition boxed set containing adaptations of the first film trilogy.
- X-Wing: Trade paperback collections of the story arcs "Battleground Tatooine," "The Phantom Affair," and "Warrior Princess."
- Crimson Empire: Crimson Empire trade paperback and a signed copy of Crimson Empire II #1.

Additionally, each prize package will include a copy of the upcoming Star Wars #1 signed by Jan Strnad.

In the event that any prize package is not voted on, a winner will be chosen at random from all entries received.

To enter, print on a postcard your name, age, address, and the prize you would like to win. Send the entry to:

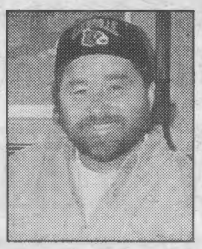
McFarlane Productions expands, Smith promoted

Todd McFarlane Productions has announced the expansion of its publishing division with the addition of several new titles.

Former Director of Marketing and Promotions Beau Smith has been promoted to Executive Director of Publishing and Marketing to oversee the expansion.

Smith will be aided by newly named Managing Editor Ted Adams, formerly vice president of entertainment for McFarlane Entertainment.

McFarlane Productions recently acquired more licensed properties, and some of those will have ties to the publishing division.



Smith

A publishing profile. Some of the new titles in the publishing division are:

• The Crow. Based on James O'Barr's creation, which has also spawned a syndicated TV series, the new series will be written by Jon J. Muth. A toy line from McFarlane Toys is also planned.

• The Black Terror. Smith returns to his creation, originally published by Eclipse, as writer with art by Clayton Crain and Alp. A line of action figures is planned, and the series is also being developed as an entertainment property.

• Ozzy Osbourne. A one-shot magazine with a comics story and articles is scheduled as is a companion toy line.

• Todd McFarlane Presents: Kiss. Reprinting the first three issues of Kiss: Psycho Circus, this magazine also features fan articles, a collection of photos from Kiss leadman Gene Simmons, as well as an interview with Simmons conducted by McFarlane.

Smith said, "This is part of a major build-up for the year 2000 when Spawn and other McFarlane properties hit with a huge impact for a year-long event, one that will put a new twist on entertainment."

Xeric Foundation announces grant recipients, new guidelines

The Xeric Foundation, a non-profit organization established by Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles co-creator Peter Laird to offer financial assistance to self-publishers, has announced its latest group of grant recipients.

Those creators receiving a total of $25,081 in grants in this cycle are:

Olivia Schanzer (Fragile Honeymoon)
Dylan Williams (Reporter)
Dawn Brown (Little Red Hot)
Joe Chiappetta (A Death in the Family)
Don Bethman Jr. (Paper Cinema)
Scott Mills (Cells)

While most grant recipients are working on their first project, Chiappetta is also known as the creator of Silly Daddy. Since the grants were awarded, Brown's Little Red Hot has been picked up by Image with a mini-series scheduled to begin in February.

Since its first grant cycle in September 1992, the Xeric Foundation has awarded more than $655,000 to both self-publishers and charitable and non-profit organizations in western Massachusetts. The latest round of those latter grants were decided in June and announced separately.

Although previous comics grants have been limited to U.S. self-publishers, the Foundation recently expanded its criteria to include Canadian self-publishers who wish to submit English entries to the Foundation for grant consideration.

The next deadline for applications is Jan. 31, and applications will be reviewed March 1.

More information and a brochure are available from Xeric Foundation, 351 Pleasant St., Box 214, Northampton, MA 01060 (413) 585-0671, or e-mail xericgrant@aol.com.

Penny-Farthing Press deals directly with retailers

A direct-ordering program, Direct Order Retailer (D-O-R), has been implemented by Penny-Farthing Press. According to Assistant Publisher Jim Owens, "This is a program designed to enhance the relationship between retail shops and Penny-Farthing Press with emphasis on providing retailers the opportunity to increase their profit margin."

The free program allows retailers to order comics directly from the publisher, increasing their discount by an average of 10%. The program also includes a credit program, special product solicitations, a subscription to Sneak Peeks (Penny-Farthing's quarterly retailer newsletter), and other incentives.

While similar programs have been implemented by other companies in the past, Owens said, "D-O-R differs in that it's not being done to supplement our distributor income, nor is it being introduced as a way to turn retailers to a life of direct ordering. Our goal with this program is simply to give the retailer as many options as possible when it comes to ordering Penny-Farthing product for their stores."

Along with the direct-ordering program, Owens also announced that Penny-Farthing is implementing a 100% returnability policy.

"Comics ordered directly by a retail shop from us for resale will be 100% returnable," he said. "The policy is very straightforward and only requires that retailers return issues in increments of at least five, that they wait at least 30 days after receipt of an issue before returning it, and that all unsold issues are returned within one year of the date of the issue." A cash refund or credit will be given.

For more information, contact Penny-Farthing at (713) 780-0300 or fax (713) 780-4004.

Jurgens goes from writing to drawing 'Thor'

By Rob Allstetter

Writer-artist Dan Jurgens is writing and drawing Thor '99, which will ship in January from Marvel. It's the first time Jurgens, who writes the monthly Thor comic book, will draw the character.

"For those who remember the end of Heroes Reborn: The Return #4, where Thor and Dr. Doom disappeared, this is the story that answers the question of where they went and what happened to them before Thor reappeared at the beginning of Avengers #1," Jurgens said. "It's a story of natural conflict along with the inclusion of a mysterious new character who will eventually make a profound impact on Thor's life."

Klaus Janson will ink Jurgens' pencils. Janson also inked Jurgens during his run on Sensational Spider-Man.

Correction

An ad for South Florida's Largest Collectibles Show II, which appeared in #1307 and #1308, listed Todd McFarlane as a special guest at the event. The show is scheduled for Dec. 12 and 13. It has since been learned that Todd McFarlane Toys, not McFarlane himself, will be at the show. The show's organizers and CBG apologize for any confusion or inconvenience.

Scouting about Image

Who you gonna call? J. Torres, co-creator and writer of Image's Siren and Slave Labor's Copybook Tales, plans to put a hip, youthful slant on the horror genre in Monster Fighters Inc., a new series of one-shots from Image. Co-created by artist Logan Luber, Monster Fighters Inc. stars Firestarter, Porte, Rapunzel, Adam Bomb, and Kid Gloves, five super-powered teen-agers who live in a haunted house owned by a cat and who drive around in a monster truck answering distress calls that come in on their toll-free phone number, (800) CALL-MFI.

"The high concept is something like Ghostbusters meets Buffy the Vampire Slayer or Scooby-Doo meets The X-Files," said Torres. "In their first few adventures, the team will take on the likes of Fright Force Five, scary comic-book characters come to life; Dirge, a former professional wrestler turned rock star whose voice wakes the dead; and just about every imaginable type of monster out there from vampires to gargoyles to mutant alligators in the sewers. The operative word for the series is fun. So far everyone involved with this project is having a blast. We hope the fans do, too!"

The one-shots are scheduled for release in April, July, and October.

More American manga. Not content to have Japan have all the fun importing comics from the Far East into the American market, James Hudnall has announced plans to produce English-language versions of two popular comic-book series from China. The two titles from the Hong Kong-based publisher Jade Dynasty, Solar Lord and Mega Dragon and Tiger, are both long-running, full-color series that have been previously translated into many languages. According to Hudnall, "They've enjoyed tremendous success in the Asian market and have a good chance of repeating their success in America."

Mega Dragon and Tiger, created by Jade Dynasty owner Tony Wong, is an action-science-fiction super-hero series set 20 years in the future, when meteors have wiped out 90% of the world's population.

Solar Lord by Khoo Fuk Lung is the story of a man possessed by a god, battling the return of demonic forces to our world. "They're great, fun super-hero comics in a style that should appeal to everyone," said Hudnall. "The art is fantastic, and the stories have plenty of cool ideas and interesting takes Americans will be new to."

Almost exactly a decade ago, Jademan introduced to America Wong's Drunken Fist, The Force of Buddha's Palm, Blood Sword, and Oriental Heroes in four-color editions scripted by Mike Baron. Those series ran for some time in the direct market in the late '80s.

The new Wong titles will be distributed through Image and are scheduled to begin in March.

Telling about 'Tellos.' Writer Todd Dezago (Impulse) and penciller Mike Wieringo have hatched plans for their first collaborative effort since their days together on Marvel's Sensational Spider-Man. The project is a fantasy and adventure project entitled Tellos, a bi-monthly ongoing or long-running maxi-series from Image. It is tentatively scheduled to make its debut in time for 1999's summer con season.

"The story features a young boy named Jarek, who finds himself in the mystical, magical realm of Tellos," revealed Wieringo, who recently resigned from an exclusive creator contract with Marvel to work on the project and other various freelance work. "With no real memories of how and why he is there, Jarek finds himself in the company of a wise, anthropomorphic tiger named Koj, who becomes his guide and companion in this realm. Along the way, they find themselves hunted and pursued by a dark wizard — but for what reason? This is the ultimate secret of the tale. There's also a beautiful dark-skinned she-pirate named Serra, various other odd and wonderful characters, floating cities, dark towers of secret power, and just lots of fun and adventure.

"Needless to say, I'm more excited about this that just about anything else I've ever done in this business. We hope to put out a really spirited, enjoyable series that will appeal to everyone, young and old. Creating a comic book all my own and owning and directing the destinies of my own characters has been a dream of mine since I first started drawing comics for myself at age 11. Now I feel as though I'm on the verge of making that dream come true and I can hardly wait."

Animated antics

Things you'll see on 'Men in Black'

By Rob Allstetter

Unlike pro baseball players and recording artists, animated series rarely suffer from the "Sophomore Slump." The second seasons of cartoons are usually better than the first for a variety of reasons, mostly that the creators have more experience and time to prepare a show for the second go-round.

Such is the case with Men in Black: The Series, which began its second season of 13 episodes on Kids' WB! Sept. 19.

The episodes — based on the movie, which was based on Lowell Cunningham's comic book — are being produced at Columbia TriStar, which also produces Fox's Godzilla.

"The second season will be the same as the first, only more of it," said producer-writer Duane Capizzi. "There's more spills, more thrills, and more chills, basically.

"We got out of the gate on last season so quickly that we had very little development time. Between the seasons, we were able to go in and discover what was working and what wasn't and we kind of fine-tuned everything. Not what I would call major overhauls, certainly, but we just went into Season Two with the attitude of pumping everything up.

"So, as a result, Season Two has the same kind of storytelling — but also more action and more laughs."

From Cornfed to K. There is one significant change from the first season. Gregg Berger, whose credits include Duckman, Channel Umptee-3, and Spider-Man, is taking over as the voice of Agent K.

"We wanted to bring some of the Tommy Lee Jones kind of twang to the role," Capizzi said. "We sort of missed that the first season. We're still playing the character the same: very dry, very deadpan, just a little bit more of Tommy Lee Jones' spirit."

Keith Diamond reprises the role of Agent J, and viewers will find the character a little more in line with the movie character in the second season.

"We came under fire for not playing J as cool as Will Smith played him in the feature," Capizzi said.

"Our reasoning — and we felt very strongly about it — was that we needed a contrast between K and J and we felt that, from a pure entertainment level, the feature worked — but from a character standpoint, the movie worked best in the first half, when he was a rookie.

"You got a clearer-cut sense of a difference. J was really the fish out of water; they wanted him to be the audience identification point. This is a guy who, when he was on the streets of New York, was on top of his game. But this world of MIB is so strange, so bizarre, he's always several steps behind, trying to play catch-up.

"We thought that worked really well in the first season, helping to define the organization and the world."

But in the second season, instead of being several steps behind K, J will be just slightly behind him in the world of MIB.

"We're playing it almost in real time, as is this is his second year on the force and he's hip to the game now," Capizzi said. "We've made him much cooler, more of a wiseacre, more sarcastic, more on top of things."

Supporting spotlights. The second season will also feature more of the supporting cast, characters like Frank the Pug and the Worm Guys. Troy the Symbiote, a popular character from the first season, will also be featured, becoming an intern at MIB.

One of the highlights for the second season is J and K's visit to Tinseltown.

"We are going to do an episode where J and K go to Hollywood and solve a Hollywood mystery," Capizzi said. "The premise of that story is that

'King of the Hill' renewed for fourth season

Fox has picked up King of the Hill for the 1999-2000 season. It will be the series' fourth season.

"Since the day it premiered, King of the Hill has always represented the very best of what we hope to achieve as a network," said Fox President Peter Roth. "The fact that King of the Hill has already made major inroads on an important new night of Fox series programming is yet another reason Fox is pleased to return it for another year."

Fox moved King of the Hill from Sundays to Tuesdays at 8 p.m. ET this season. In that time period, the series has improved the network's ratings 54% in adults 18-49 and 61% in adults 18-34.

King of the Hill is created and executive produced by Mike Judge, creator of Beavis & Butt-Head, and Greg Daniels, co-executive producer of The Simpsons.

all the aliens you see in big-budget studio films are actually real aliens. The 1950s were a time where they were guys in rubber suits, but, as aliens infiltrated society, the MIBs managed to get them employment, and it kind of made sense."

A new dynamic duo. Another episode has K and J becoming super-heroes. "They get infected by alien technology and find that they've gained super-powers," Capizzi said. "So we're kind of doing our super-hero episode. But, of course, a trio of villains have also come into contact with the same piece of alien technology, and it's battle-royal time."

Capizzi said he was especially excited with the season finale. "The agents actually take one step into space," he said. "We're never going to fly them to other planets in the series, but we do have a space-station adventure planned."

Writers return. Capizzi said a lot of the same writers return for the second season, and Steve Roberts, who worked on Max Headroom, is also contributing. Rafael Rosado has joined the crew a supervising director.

It was hoped that Men in Black creator Cunningham would write an episode of the second season, but he couldn't because of a scheduling conflict.

"We came really close, but it didn't work out," Capizzi said. "We are going to make it a point to have Lowell write one for Season Three."

That is, of course, if there is a third season — which, based on the quality of the second season, is something Capizzi said he feels confident will happen.

"Everybody who has been privy to Season Two has agreed that it's really a knockout," Capizzi said. "Season One was great, but Season Two is even better from all standpoints."

'Micronauts' moves ahead

As previously reported in Mass o' Media, a Micronauts animated television series is being geared for a fall 1999 start in syndication.

Kaleidoscope Media Group and Abrams/Gentile Entertainment have announced they have reached agreement with two new co-production partners to ensure the start of production of 26 half-hour episodes before the end of the year for delivery next fall.

Annex Entertainment of Canada and Gribouille of France will be the production partners for the series. Annex, headed by Richard Borchiver, former president of Paragon, has reached agreement with YTV to become the Canadian broadcaster of Micronauts. Gribouille, a producer of animated and computer-generated product, will be the lead production entity. Didier Pourcel and Lloyd Nathan, the managing partners in the company, have recently joined Ellipse in production of an Excaliber series.

Anthony Gentile of Abrams/Gentile said that Micronauts will open with a five-part episode that could be released on home video later as a movie. He also said that Micronauts will feature a mixture of traditional animation with computer-generated animation and perhaps even some live-action elements.

"It's very ambitious," Gentile said.

Characters in the show will include Arcturus Rann, Princess Mari, Acroyear, Bug, Prince Argon, Biotron, Microtron, Baron Karza and Shaitan.

And an agreement has been reached with toy manufacturer Giochi Preziosi for Micronauts toys. Giochi Preziosi, one of the top three European toy manufacturers, will be working with Abrams/Gentile in the development of a new technology-based toy line that will be introduced worldwide in early 2000.

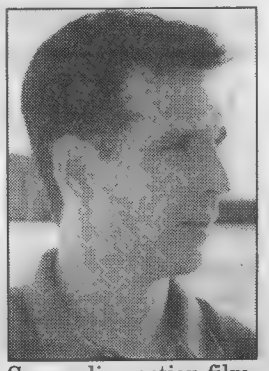
McFarlane plants more Korn



Spawn live-action film.

Spawn creator Todd McFarlane, who directed the music video for Pearl Jam's "Do the Evolution" with Kevin Altieri, is working on another music video, "Freak on a Leash," the second single from Korn's Follow the Leader.

"The video will be one-half live-action and one-half animated, with myself producing and Todd directing the animated section," said Terry Fitzgerald of Todd McFarlane Productions. "There will be a second director for use on the live-action, but we are still debating who that will be.

"The storyline is amusing and should be great when completed. Expect an air date of around late January."

McFarlane also provided the art to the cover of the Korn CD, and the group performed on the soundtrack to the Fitzgerald added that work continues on the Spawn movie sequel from New Line Cinema. "Todd and I will be the active producers this time around," he said.

So far, October has been a banner month for the comics reader-historian-collector. Beginning with the smashing CBG #1300, the month only continues to get better. I loved the article by Craig Shutt (Mr. Silver Age) and articles by Brent Frankenhoff, Marc Patton, Jack Abramowitz, Matt Brady, and James Cangialosi. To me, the true memories of collecting comics in my youth come to the forefront each and every time I read one of Craig's columns. Keep up the good work!

Also in that issue, Maggie touted the new index released from Howard Keltner via Bob Klein. The Golden Age Comic Book Index 1935-1955 is a historical resource that no self-respecting comics historian should be without. If you're looking for pictures, forget it. If you're looking for detailed information, make sure you get a copy. (Oh, and by the way — thanks for the first-edition copy, Bob.)

Greg Theakston at Pure Imagination is just cranking out those issues of The Complete Jack Kirby. The newest one is hot off the presses and I highly recommend it. Where else can you get these hard-to-find issues of early Jack Kirby work at an affordable price? Bravo, Greg! It's too bad you can't send out the new editions any quicker for those of us who need a constant JK fix.

John Morrow at TwoMorrows is also producing a high-quality publication with his The Jack Kirby Collector. Being a Gil Kane-ophile, I really enjoyed the interview done by Jon Cooke. Keep up the super work — I'm always looking for great things to come out of this publication.

Thanks to fellow Gil Kane-ophile Bob McKinnon, who turned me on to a great new series done by Jim Starlin: Hardcore Station. After reading one, I picked up the past issues and can hardly wait for the next installment. It's reminiscent of his early work in the '70s and '80s with Dreadstar. I even caught the reference to John Gault in one of the issues.

Mark Waid is still cranking out the DC issues of JLA: Year One, which is quickly becoming one of my favorite titles. His care with the characters of the Silver Age is equal to the care that Roy Thomas took with the Golden Age characters.

The only negative comment I have to make concerns Marvel Comics. With the start of the new numbering system (back at #1), I won't be buying any of the old titles, with the possible exception of the first couple of issues. It breaks my heart to have almost an entire run of Marvel Comics from 1963 to present and stop due to the lack of concern on Marvel's part to keep the consistency of the numbering intact. I'm sure the move will attract new readers, but I fear that it will lose much of the old-time readership.

Other than the Marvel incident, I'm looking forward to an exciting remainder of the year in all areas of comics-related publications. Keep up the good work — and, to Marvel, get back on the bandwagon.

[As ever, it'd be a good idea to check out those issues you're thinking of giving up because of an announced change. The point is, of course, that (aside from the ongoing compulsion of completism) you're well-advised to pick up what you'll enjoy reading and to drop what you dislike reading. Does numbering really play such an important part in your enjoyment of a title? Just asking.]

Aaron Naegele

1. Whatever happened to the talks with Wal-Mart about selling comics again? I think it's been over a year.

2. Thank you for issue #1300. I think I understand Crisis now. Maybe ...

3. When people say "For Pete's Sake" or "For the love of Pete," are they speaking of Peter David?

4. Speaking of David, I read in his column of greatest moments of the full page of Spidey lifting the car. I assumed this was the first full-page artwork. But I have now read Amazing Spider-Man Annual #1. It featured the debut of the Sinister Six and had a full page of Spidey fighting each one. Was this the first comic book to feature full-page art?

[1. We think Wal-Mart has comics on its racks again and indicated everything was pretty much settled, when we reported in #1267 that comics racks had already returned to some locations.

2. You probably understand Crisis as well as it can be understood.

3. Probably not; he's usually referred to as "Peter," rather than "Pete." Sort of like Peter Parker, who's not ordinarily referred to as "Pete," either.

4. I don't know what the first comic book was to feature full-page art, but the occurrance came probably 15 or more years earlier than any Spider-Man story. You'll see a sample in CBG #1308's coverage of the work of Will Eisner – and Eisner did it in more than his splash panels (in case you meant to make an exception of splash panels).]

So Peter David did not care for John Byrne's recent spin on Spidey's origin. Well, that's OK. It's his perogative to pick and choose what he likes and doesn't like, but his reasons seem petty and childish.

Let's look at some of his complaints. As for the buildings on the cover, well, it is a new perspective on Spider-Man's origin and perhaps Byrne was trying to convey this with his art. You know: giving credit to the old with a slant toward the new. And the web that David seems so disturbed about connecting to a word balloon is just the slack left in Spidey's hand; the actual attachment is off the art.

The meat of his complaints however, dealt with the actual crime. Once again I think David's nitpicking here. Who cares about the geography of New York City in relation to the crime? Maybe fans who live in New York City do, but I doubt if the majority of the readers gave it five seconds of thought. As for the relationship of the computer store, the criminal, and Spider-Man, perhaps Byrne was trying to add that much more guilt to Spidey. After all, Ben did buy the computer for him and was tagged by the crook in doing so. Was it dumb to follow Ben that far to steal from him? Maybe so, but we see actual stupid acts by criminals every day. Fox has made a cottage industry out of "America's Stupidest Criminals." And why did the crook assume Spidey was also a criminal? Well, why not? People to tend to identify others with themselves, and the costume is a bit sinister, what with the webs and spiders and all.

These complaints are, in the end, irrelevant. Marvel is making an admirable attempt to try to make its comic books more accessible to new readers. I don't know if it will work, nor do I myself particularly like it. I think older readers feel alienated about things like this. For that matter, I don't think Byrne likes the idea of starting over all that much, either. But if it was going to be done, and it was, better him than [some others].

There's a question that's been nagging at me for the past several years; now that CBG has answered it for me, I thought I'd write to say thank you, and tell you all about it.

See, I really like Concrete. And there's this book called The Complete Concrete which collects the entire, originally serialized run of Concrete from Dark Horse Presents. (I think that's where it ran; I'm doing this all from memory). There are also two volumes of Concrete: The Short Stories, which between them cover about a decade. So, if I own all three of these books, do I own every Concrete appearance from before the relatively recent mini-series/trade paperbacks? And if I don't, then what am I missing? Most important of all, how do I find out what I'm missing?

Sure, I can look in a price guide, but if there's a mini-series or one-shot with a title that doesn't start with "concrete," it won't be listed with the other comic books. If I don't even know that there is something I don't have, then I sure don't know what letter to look it up under. So how do I find out?

Appearances in anthologies might not show up at all, even if I know the name. Unless the contents of each issue are specifically listed, I still won't know which issue is the one I want. So, how do I find out? That's the question you folks at CBG have answered for me. How do I find out?

And the answer is, read CBG. You see, Concrete isn't the only character whose exploits are difficult to keep track of. (Or, worse yet, might be difficult to keep track of; there's nothing more frustrating than a search for something that doesn't exist.) Grendel is another one. And the recent article on Grendel included that boiled-down, hyper-focused price guide, the one that listed all of the original appearances and all of the reprints and cross-references them, into the bargain. If you'd included a list (not necessarily a price list) of ancillary merchandise, it would've been perfect.

That's why I'm writing to say thank you. Thanks for the Grendel list; it was enormously helpful, to me and to others too, I'm sure.

I guess my only question now is, who's next? Obviously, my vote goes to Concrete, but I'd like to see a comprehensive listing, like the Grendel one, for a lot of different series.

How about Akiko? I keep hearing wonderful things about the series, but I can't find the beginning to start at. Maybe Usagi Yojimbo: what's the cheapest way to get it all, from the top? The Elementals family would seem a ripe field, particularly if such a list could include a little separating of the Willingham wheat from the anybody-else chaff. I'm sure other readers would have their own suggestions for characters and series who need the Grendel treatment. Heck, I'd bet that there are fans who've already compiled lists like this, fans who'd just love to share their wealth of information, if CBG gave them a place to do so.

What d'ya think, Maggie? A regular or recurring feature, focusing on a different difficult-to-sort-out series every month or so? Maybe a price-guide installment composed of a whole bunch of little, focused mini-guides like this?

Or, heck, maybe you could just run my letter and I'll be lucky enough that someone will send me the info I'm after. Not nearly as much fun that way, though.

Anyway, it's a thought. If you hate the idea, well, at least I got a chance to bring it up. Thanks, as always, for the wonderful work on the paper, gang. Looking forward to #1400 already.

P.S. Now, if I ever manage to track down a Global Guardians appearance list, I can die a happy man.

[Hmm. As a fellow completist, I can say this bears more exploration. In the meantime, here's some information on Concrete. Trade paperbacks in print are:

The Complete Concrete (first 10 black-and-white issues — which also contains Land & Sea, A New Life, and Odd Jobs, see below: earlier, smaller paperback collections)*

Concrete: The Complete Short Stories 1986-1989 (16 short stories)*

Concrete: Short Stories 1990-1995 (12 short stories)*

Concrete: Fragile Creature
Concrete: Killer Smile
Concrete: Think like a Mountain
Concrete: Strange Armor

And here are some Concrete highlights in chronological order (remembering that the first story appeared in Dark Horse Presents #1 in 1986 — and sources of short stories are identified in the story collections):

1987-88: Concrete #1-10

*1989: Concrete Color Special; Concrete: Land & Sea; Concrete: A New Life

*1990: Concrete Celebrates Earth Day; Concrete: Odd Jobs

1991-92: Concrete: Fragile Creature #1-4

1993: Concrete: Eclectica #1-2

1994: Concrete: Killer Smile #1-4

1996: Concrete: Think Like a Mountain #1-6

1997-98: Concrete: Strange Armor #1-5]

Consider this a belated offering in the far-from-concluded dialogue concerning favorite comic strips, their unique influence and special place within the pantheon of our four-color Olympus. Thus stated, I'd like to salute a particular opus whose pedigree is quite without peer.

I refer to Leonard Starr's superlative On Stage, which spotlighted (pun most assuredly intended) the adventures of Mary Perkins, an actress who encountered no end of fascinating characters in or outside of the theatre.

What really distinguished the series was its mature view of the world at large and all the individuals who orbited within its universe in small. Nothing was ever too-convenient black-and-white. Subtle gray was the color which sculpted not only the characters under artistic scope but the situations and their resolution, as well.

No costume cut-ups here — simply the grand tapestry of the human condition in all its super heroism.

As to that, Starr's graceful writing and golden art meshed magnificently in creating an unforgettable enterprise which still, even on this cusp of the merry millennium, remains in an elegant class of its own.

Mind you, in the 1980s Cartoonagio attempted to start printing the strip from its very first appearance and, later in the decade, Blackthorne Publishing issued a handsome volume containing two stories. "Captain Virtue Strikes Back" and "Escape from Russia." Since then?

More's the profound pity: nothing.

RRR (Right Royal Romantic) that I am, I still hold out the optimistic hope there has to be a peerless publisher out there with the vision, financial wherewithal, and, above all, visionary appreciation to eventually collect Leonard Starr's masterpiece in a showcase befitting its special brilliance.

Still, who knows? Maybe we'll be blessed to live long enough to see this intangible dream manifest into richly rewarding, to say nothing of pristinely permanent, reality.

And remember: You read it here first.

[You'll get no argument here. On Stage was a magnificent combination of terrific art and compelling storytelling. Starr's mastery extended to the tricky nature of newspaper storytelling: His stories could be rewardingly read in any of three configurations: dailies only, Sundays only, or dailies combined with Sundays. Each week contained a Saturday climax and a Sunday resolution — and narrative hook.

Moreover, he brilliantly blended his ongoing characters with current entertainment trends — his stories involving characters evoking such performers as Gary Cooper and Christopher Lee (the latter being one of Starr's finest creations, Maximus: a horror actor whose gimmick — unknown to the world — was to remove his makeup to reveal the horrifying face underneath).

The Blackthorne reprint, unfortunately, accommodated Starr's own wishes, editing out panels that were taken to be repetitive. Fans of strip reprints find that the most satisfying construction is to reprint a strip in its entirety — presuming enough familiarity on the part of the reader to overlook any duplication of information. In the editing, much of the brilliant original pacing (and chunks of characterization) was lost.

I'd fight with you to be first in line to buy faithful reprints of the strip from Strip #1 — Monday through Friday on the left, Sunday tabloid page on the right. Any publishers listening? (Starr's now doing Annie from Tribune Media Services Inc., 435 N. Michigan Ave., Ste. 1500, Chicago, IL 60611, in case you want to reach him.]

I attended my first San Diego Con back in August. The convention lived up to the hype this popular show has attained for years, as written about in CBG and elsewhere.

A huge building, the convention center, had clearly marked signs making accessibility easy. The dealers' room was huge but not cramped, housing booths filled with comics, videos, toys, and books on one side and comic-book artists, writers, and comic-book companies on the right. The events guide, handed out when I picked up my badge at the front desk, was extremely helpful, providing maps, local restaurants, bus routes, event times and locations, and a list of professional artist and writer autograph sessions.

The panels, be they Golden Age, voice actors, or Batman Animated, were well-run question-and-answer sessions with anecdotes from the guests. The panel hosts knew their subjects and seem well-prepared. Overall, this was one of the best-run conventions I've ever attended, memorable from start to finish. I hope Mid-Ohio-Con is at least half as good.

Oh, So?

What's up with Marvel? It lucks into a good idea with the "new" Avengers, Iron Man, and Captain America. (Fantastic Four has been a big disappointment). It immediately starts over the numbering of Daredevil, Spider-Man, and other characters' comics titles. Sorry, Marvel, but your solution to your sales woes isn't new #1s and major revamps; it's getting good writers and artists putting out readable stories that pay attention to character continuity and hero histories.

I happen to like Daredevil but do not appreciate that the current storyline is essentially a six-part mini-series. I want to know what comes next. Why should I put time and interest in a comic book that might be gone in six months or less?

I hear DC has an exciting team title I'll have to check out. If it lives up to the hype, I'll spend my money there.

Matt Levin
Walking Man Comics

Here are a few titles I just gotta call attention to!

Jeff Nicholson's Colonia (Bad Habit comics) is a plunge into wonderful fantasy similar to Pak-kin's Land (also highly recommended) in that it features a boy entering a wildly fantastic land and is graceful in line and wording. It's different in that it's more outrageous and — apparently — historically based on writings (largely passionate and inaccurate) from the times of Columbus' discovery of "India." Wonderful, wonder-filled drawings and often-clever dialogue.

Saturday Night's writer-artist Anson Jew draws exact, graceful, evocative, and deeply communicative cats — expressive human faces, as well. Several short stories focus on human relationships, all chance encounters. The writing is well-paced, the dialogue and situations realistic. Write P.O. Box 1625, Novato, CA 94947.

In Jungle Tales of Cavewoman, writer-artist Budd Root achieves depth, wit, irony, action, tension, and satisfaction in an all-but-wordless prehistoric day spent fishing. Sumptuous black and white art depicts the nearly invincible Cavewoman battling prehistoric shark, allosaur, and tyrannosaur, all for a roasted-fish dinner. Excellent, excellent work from Basement Comics, 801 Hunters Road, Huntersville, NC 28078.

Charles Vess, Linda Medley, Mark Crilley, Jill Thompson, Stan Sakai, and Jeff Smith: all in one book: Trilogy Tour II. Bone, Usagi, Scary Godmother, Akiko, Castle Waiting, and an early pre-Bone Bone story by Vess. Beautiful, delightful, largely in color, new stories — from Cartoon Books, P.O. Box 16973, Columbus, OH 43216.

Clan Apis begins with Genesis according to bees — and travels the scientific road toward transformation and resurrection: all told with scientific accuracy and epic storytelling, superlative graphics, and comic pacing, from the viewpoint of a worker bee giving the facts and myths of life to a larva. An outstanding achievement of blending fact and comic-book fantasy, by Jay Hosler, Active Synapse, 1531 Presidential, Columbus, OH.

Junkyard Enforcer by Josh Sheppard is set in the really poor side of town, 1930s, where a tough, bright kid at the bottom of the criminal ladder begins to work his way up. Harsh language — but a feel for the times as real as Kings in Disguise or The Spirit — but never the hope anything like The Spirit will appear to save us. Boxcar Productions, P.O. Box 50641, Pasadena, CA 91115.

Alley Oop returns, with new stories, gloriously colored, driven by basic humor and often elevated by clever gags. Excellent drawing, slapstick writing, and a remarkable, strong moral sense (e.g., contesting with Samson, Oop realizes Samson's ego's on the line and Oop gracefully lets Samson retain his dignity). Good fun, share-able with younger readers, by Mike Champman and Jack and Carole Bender, from Antarctic Press, 7272 Wurzbach, Suite 204, San Antonio, TX 78240.

Some promising titles forthcoming: Age of Bronze, League of Gentlemen, Little Red Hot, Stray Cats, Far West, Wild Person in the Woods, and Batman/Hellboy/Starman.

And, I hope, these need no introduction: Bone, Castle Waiting, Leave It to Chance, Dreamwalker, Finder, Humungous Man, Kan, Keyhole, Nowhere, Starchild, Strangers in Paradise, Stray Bullets, Totally Horses, Tyrant, Usagi, Wolff & Byrd, The Wretch, and that aardvark comical book.

[Matt's being cute here. But, if you are new to the comics scene, he's talking about Dave Sim and Gerhard's Cerebus from Aardvark-Vanaheim.

Oh, and virtually all the titles recommended are available via your friendly local comics shop. If you don't see the title you're looking for on the shelf, ask whether it can be ordered.]

Dave Pfeil

I recently moved to another place and now have no room in the house to store my comics, so I put them in the garage for the time being. Winter is coming, and I know that comics can't take extreme cold or heat. Do you know what temperature would put my comics in danger of damage? Any advice on how to protect them would be welcome. Thanks.

[JG: Actually, cold temperatures are not a problem when storing comic books. What could be a problem is the fact that you're keeping them in the garage.

Car exhaust fumes can form chemicals that will damage the paper of your comics, if they are exposed to air. You'll want to use bags — which will also help against another big enemy: dampness. And avoid stacking comics boxes against an outside wall; condensation in that location can do major damage. Wherever you put them in your garage, check on the comics from time to time. Spring would be a bit late to discover that chipmunks have found pulp paper makes great nesting material.

Also a good idea: elevating the comics boxes off the concrete floor by setting them on a pallet of some sort.]

Dateline: @!!?* BY FRED HEMBECK

GREETINGS, EVERYONE! I'M FRED HEMBECK, AND I'M HAPPY AS GUANO TO HAVE AS MY GUEST TODAY THE ONE AND ONLY (AT LEAST, THIS YEAR) CAPED CRUSADER, BATMA--

I'M NOT HERE TO ENDURE YOUR FANBOY DRIVEL, HEMBECK. INSTEAD, I'D LIKE TO USE THIS FORUM TO MAKE AN ANNOUNCEMENT, SO IF YOU DON'T MIND?...

Uh, SURE. GO RIGHT AHEAD.

EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY, I'M RESIGNING FROM THE JUSTICE LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

WHA-AAT? YOU'RE QUITTING THE JLA?!?

LISTEN, I'M TEMPTED TO QUIT DC COMICS ENTIRELY!

BUT-- WHY? WAS IT THOSE TWO JOEL SHUMACHER MOVIES?

THAT MIGHT'VE BEEN REASON ENOUGH, BUT NO, THAT'S NOT IT.

I ASSUME YOU'VE BEEN FOLLOWING MY BOOKS?

SURE. IT'S MY JOB.

THEN YOU KNOW ALL ABOUT THE EARTHQUAKE.

OH, RIGHT.

"CATACLYSM"!

IT'S A CATACLYSM, ALL RIGHT. IN EACH AND EVERY ISSUE OF "BATMAN", "DETECTIVE", "SHADOW OF THE BAT", "CHRONICLES", "ROBIN", "NIGHTWING" AND "CATWOMAN" YOU'LL SEE ALL THE DEATH, DESTRUCTION, AND DEBRIS GOTHAM CITY HAS TO OFFER. SEEMS THE ONLY RELIEF I GET THESE DAYS ARE IN THOSE RAPIDLY PROLIFERATING "ELSEWORLD" TITLES --AND HALF THE TIME, I'M A VAMPIRE IN 'EM!!

HEY, THESE THINGS HAPPEN. LOOK AT CAPTAIN MARVEL-- THE TOWN HE LIVED IN WAS RECENTLY NUKED. AND, OF COURSE, WHO COULD FORGET WHAT HAPPENED TO COAST CITY?..

MORE IMPORTANTLY, WHO COULD FORGET WHAT HAPPENED TO HAL JORDAN AFTER HIS HOME BASE WAS DESTOYED, hmm?

WELL, OKAY, SURE-- BUT JUST WHAT DOES ANY OF THIS HAVE TO DO WITH YOU PULLING OUT OF THE JLA?

SIMPLE. I'M PULLING OUT BECAUSE THEY'RE NOT PUTTING OUT.

...I BEG YOUR PARDON?...

I'VE GOT ME A MAJOR METROPOLITAN CITY REDUCED TO RUBBLE-- NOT TO MENTION A NO-LONGER-VERY-STATELY WAYNE MANOR TO OPERATE OUT OF, AND I ASK YOU, WHERE OH WHERE ARE MY ESTEEMED COLLEAGUES?

I MEAN, SUPERMAN COULD HAVE THE BATCAVE BACK UP AND RUNNING AGAIN IN AN AFTERNOON. THAT NEW LANTERN KID, WITH JOHN'S HELP, COULD USE HIS RING TO REPAIR A LOT OF THE INFRASTRUCTURE. AND THE FLASH? IMAGINE WHAT HE COULD ACCOMPLISH WITH HIS SPEED? WONDER WOMAN'S GOD-GRANTED ABILITIES SURE WOULD COME IN HANDY AS WELL!

...AND AQUAMAN?

AQUAMAN COULD, Y'KNOW, SEARCH GOTHAM HARBOR FOR PIRATE GOLD.

SURE HE COULD.

MY POINT IS, THE ONLY HELP I'VE RECEIVED IN DEALING WITH THIS TRAGEDY HAS BEEN FROM ROBIN, NIGHTWING, AND HUNTRESS, AND, WHILE I CERTAINLY APPRECIATE THEIR EFFORTS, YOU KNOW AS WELL AS I THAT SUPES COULD DO WHAT THEY'VE DONE IN A WEEK ON HIS WAY TO THE DAILY PLANET MONDAY MORNING!

DON'T BE SO HARD ON THE LEAGUERS, oh DARKEST OF KNIGHTS-- THEY'RE JUST TRYING TO PREVENT ANY FURTHER DESTRUCTION.

WHAT ARE YOU TALKING ABOUT? THEY'RE PROS! WITH A CO-ORDINATED EFFORT, THEY'D HAVE GOTHAM CLEANED UP IN NO TIME!?

EXACTLY. AND IN SO DOING, THEY'D CAUSE AN EVEN GREATER CALAMITY..

--THE TOTAL OBLITERATION OF A CAREFULLY PLANNED --AND ONGOING-- STORY ARC. SURE, LOGIC SAYS THAT THE JLA SHOULD TIDY UP YOUR CITY, BUT THEN, WHERE WOULD THAT LEAVE YOU? FIGHTING THE JOKER? THE PENGUIN? TWO-FACE --TWICE YEARLY? BEEN DONE. Uh uh, THE POWERS THAT BE HAVE DEMOLISHED GOTHAM CITY. DEAL WITH IT, BAT-GUY.

I GUESS YOU'RE RIGHT.

BUT CHEER UP, FELLA (IF, GIVEN YOUR PERSONALITY, THAT'S AT ALL POSSIBLE)-- YOU NEVER KNOW WHEN YOUR BOSSES MIGHT PULL A RABBIT OUT OF LIMBO.

RECOGNIZE THIS VOICE?

HELLO, OLD FRIEND.

Huh?

GEO-FORCE?!

YUP, IT'S YOUR FORMER COLLEAGUE FROM THE OUTSIDERS --Y'KNOW, THE ONE WITH THE EARTH-SHIFTING POWERS?..

I'M REGRETTING YOUR TROUBLES, BATMAN, AND IF YOU ALLOW ME TO, MY HELP I'D BE HAPPY TO PROVIDE?..

GREAT! WITH YOUR ABILITIES, GOTHAM WILL--

AND FOR ME PERHAPS YOU COULD BE DOING A FAVOR? MAYBE GET OUTSIDERS GROUP THIRD SHOT AT REGULAR SERIES?..

GOT ANY IDEA WHAT CAVE CARSON'S DOING THESE DAYS?..

FUSHIGI YÛGI

THE MYSTERIOUS PLAY

Winner of the Best Original Video Animation Award at Anime Expo '97 and '98

Miaka was an ordinary Tokyo school girl, but when she reads a mysterious book, she is thrust into the Universe of the Four Gods - a magical version of ancient China where martial arts and magic are key components of war. To return home to her family and her beloved fast food restaurants Miaka must summon a god! However, she will also encounter loyal friendship, bloody massacres, absolute betrayal, and true love in an adventure that will teach her the true value of life.

Writing off the Ranch...

...Skywalker Ranch: STAR WARS comics writers Jan Strnad and Michael Stackpole discuss writing comics the Lucasfilm way

"Unfortunately, the more you know [about the prequels], the less you can say...

"...which is why those who know nothing have all the fun spreading rumors, and I have to clam up like Mr. Mxyzptlk, afraid of getting banished."

— Jan Strnad

By Michael Stackpole

My relationship with Jan Strnad — the writer on Dark Horse's unlimited Star Wars series starting in December — began when we worked together on Dark Horse's X-Wing: Rogue Squadron series and the story arcs "Battleground: Tattooine" and "Requiem for a Rogue." Jan scripted from outlines I'd written and, when I took over the scripting, he lost a job. One of my concerns going into this interview was whether Strnad held any animosity over that, so I began by asking him flat-out, "Do you hate me for that?"

Jan's reply was reassuring. "I remember in one of our telephone conversations, while I was scripting 'Requiem for a Rogue,' " he said. "You mentioned wanting to try your hand at scripting comics. I pretty much saw the handwriting on the wall at that point. It just makes sense for the plotter to write the script if at all possible. And who could blame you for longing after the glamorous world of the comic-book writer?

"So, the answer is, 'No, I don't hate you.' Hey, is something on your front porch burning? Better go stamp it out, quick!"

The beginnings of a vision. Star Wars Editor Peet Janes had sent me copies of Jan's scripts for the new ongoing series, and what impressed me most was the sense of graphic vision I got from them. I was curious how Jan learned to see so clearly in pictures and incorporate graphic elements into them that bound the stories together. He went philosophical on me when he answered, "Ah, Grasshopper, mastery of such techniques comes only from a lifetime spent reading every comic book produced since 1956. Or something close to it.

"I was a rabid comic-book fan early in life, learning to wrap my brain around the word 'invulnerable' at an age when most other kids were reading about how Tip can run.

"Then I played around with drawing comic books in junior high school but gave up all thoughts of an art career a few years later for the same reason I gave up becoming a stop-motion animator: impatience. Well, that and the lack of any apparent artistic ability. Still, my flirtation with drawing gave me a visual approach that's served me well in writing comic books and cartoons."

A mature attitude. Comics are thought of by many as being for kids, and Star Wars certainly has elements that appeal more to a younger audience than an older one. Does Jan worry about incorporating stuff for both levels of audience, and how does he try to balance that sort of content?

"I write for an older audience," he said, "but I leave out the swear words. Seriously. 'Prelude to Rebellion,' the first arc in the new Star Wars series, deals with my own ambivalent attitude toward high technology and also with a father's reconciliation with his neglected daughter, as well as with plots and counterplots and aliens and all the trappings of Star Wars. This is a lot of layers for 'mere comic books,' but the fact is, I've never seen comic books as being 'mere.' Nor is Star Wars, which has always dealt with heavy themes within the context of kid-friendly space adventures.

"I try to give the artist, Anthony Winn, neat stuff to draw. But that neat stuff has to have a context to give it meaning. We have to know the main character, Ki-Adi-Mundi, not just as a Jedi Knight but as a man. We have to involve him in an engaging story, and that brings us back to the story being 'about' something that relates to our own lives. If I cover all of these bases, I'll naturally create something that appeals to more than one age group.

"I draw on my experience and instincts in balancing the content. I'm sure that I err in one direction or the other for different readers, but I try to please myself and my editor, Peet Janes at Dark Horse, and the folks at Lucasfilm and hope that the audience responds well to it."

Keeping secrets. When working on any Star Wars-related series, the writer gets invited into a world of secrets that the general public doesn't share. I was curious as to how long it took Jan to wipe a goofy grin off his face when assigned this new series and just how outrageous he found some of the rumors running around about what he was doing or what Lucasfilm was going to be doing in the future.

"The goofy grin is still there," Strnad said, smiling. "It's very heady to have so many people interested in your work, but there are pitfalls.

"Right out of the chute I got into trouble by revealing more about the comics story 'Prelude to Rebellion' than I should have. I have a web page (www.atom-brain.com) where I write about my work and life, and I inadvertently said too much about the new series. Luckily, at that point I knew absolutely nothing about The Phantom Menace (which didn't even have a title yet), so I couldn't reveal anything too harmful to Lucasfilm.

"Unfortunately, the more you know, the less you can say, which is why those who know nothing can speculate freely and spread rumors and have all the fun, and I now have to clam up like Mr. Mxyzptlk, afraid of saying something that'll get me banished. I try to just sit back and enjoy the show, say as little as possible, and hope that fans understand my plight."

Building the mythos. While it can sometimes be difficult to create characters to slip into a saga of the mythic proportion of Star Wars, Jan disagreed, saying, "It isn't difficult, it's fun!"

This led to a related question that I get all the time: Just how does one make those names mesh? Jan said, "The names are hard. I usually just start typing variations and moving letters around until I like it on a gut level."

Breaking in. Both Jan and I have been approached by fans who say, "I have a great idea for a Star Wars story. How can I break into writing for Star Wars?"

Jan's answer: "I'd have to reply: 'I honestly have no idea. Be good, be lucky.' It certainly wasn't something I planned, just an opportunity I grabbed."

From fan to creator. Like many fans who get to fulfill their dream, Jan said, "I had no notion whatever that I'd be working on Star Wars material 20 years later! Life just continually provides you with surprises, though, and some of them are good. I can't wait until some of the characters I've worked with begin to appear on store shelves as action figures and such."

As for his plans, Jan said, "I'd love to write a Ki-Adi-Mundi novel. I'm hoping that publication of my horror novel Many Happy Returns will convince Lucasfilm that I have the writing chops to do it."

Writing SF and fantasy comics is nothing new to Jan Strnad. Check out his eight-issue run of Dalgoda, the anthropomorphic canine adventurer, published by Fantagraphics from 1984 to 1986. (To be honest, his photo above is circa that era!) Extra points if you can figure out where he got the series' name!

Answer: Naturally, it's an agrammed from Lad, A Dog.

"I created Batman," the strange man said.

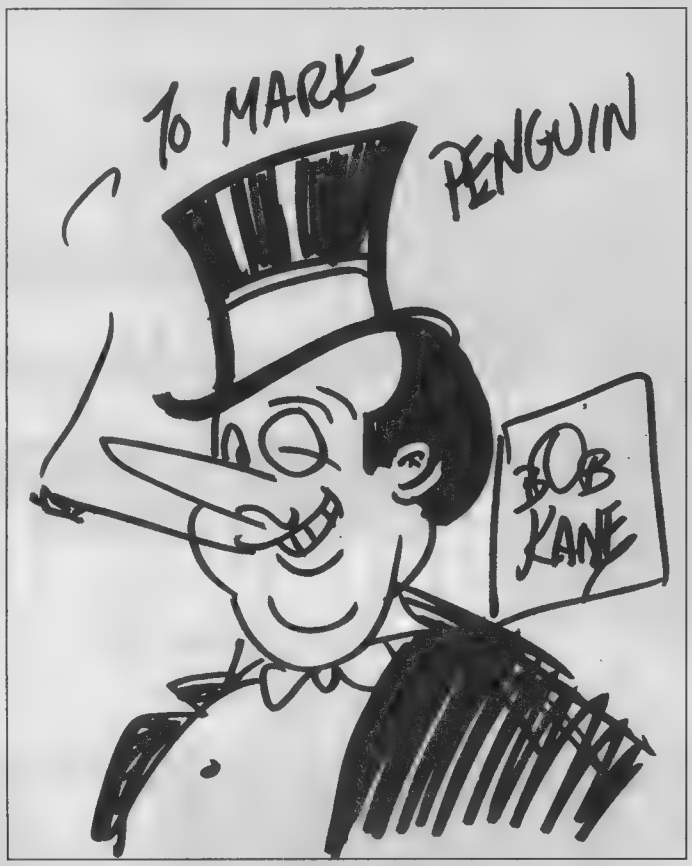
Never mind Bruce Wayne. The real "man of mystery" was the guy who created him.

There was something I didn't understand when I was a kid. Actually, there were a lot of things I didn't understand when I was a kid, and their number has only grown. However, among the few things I didn't understand back then but think I do now, is how come Bob Kane, who was allegedly drawing all those Batman stories, kept changing his style every month or so.

"The wide range of quality and art styles was baffling, since, if one believed the signature, they were all by Bob Kane. Some of them even looked like they were drawn by the same guys who were drawing Superman."
— Mark Evanier

As far back as I can remember, I've read comic books. Always have, probably always will. At some point, in or around my tenth year of life, I became aware of the fact that comics didn't just happen — like the sun coming up or the tide coming in or the Dodgers losing. Someone had to make comics occur — to write them and to draw them. I became fascinated to know as much as one could know about those people — the ones who made the magic.

In 1962, this was not easy. No comics carried credits, and only a few artists signed their work. Few titles carried letters columns and only rarely did they drop a name. There were, of course, no comics conventions, no books on the subject, and no magazines like this one. Slowly but certainly, though, by seizing on the occasional nugget of info and cross-matching art styles, I managed to affix names to many of my favorite strips.



But not all. The ones that really had me stymied were Batman and Detective Comics.

I was avidly buying up all the back numbers I could find. Some I liked, some I didn't. The wide range of quality and art styles was baffling, since, if one believed the signature, they were all by Bob Kane. In fact, some of them even looked like they were drawn by the same guys who were drawing Superman.

As you can see, Batman stories had already made a huge impression on me. I approached this enigma with the same determination — and dogged adherence to logic — that The Caped One himself used in besting The Joker every few months.

To add to the puzzle: The Batman editor, Jack Schiff, oversaw World's Finest Comics, which then featured Superman and Batman. The world's finest heroes were often rendered in an art style that appeared in Batman stories signed "Bob Kane" — and also, I noted, in the Supergirl stories in Action Comics. But the Supergirl stories were not signed — by Bob Kane or anyone.

It didn't seem reasonable that the always-credited creator of Batman was also drawing World's Finest Comics and Supergirl, anonymously. Then, one day, the Supergirl feature began to bear the signature of someone named Jim Mooney, but the drawing style didn't change. This added yet another piece to the puzzle.

I wasn't the only fan-sleuth working this case. Others were similarly mystified — and some came to the conclusion that there was no such person as Bob Kane. I fearlessly deduced that, while there might well be a Bob Kane, that individual wasn't drawing all the stories that were so signed.

But was he drawing any of them? And, if so, which ones?

About this time, a fanzine came out in which someone remarked that Kane hadn't drawn Batman for more than a decade — that everything appearing under that byline was ghosted by others. I was proud to have my deduction confirmed — but this revelation-in-mimeo brought a sharp, outraged letter from a writer for DC Comics. In the very next issue, he took the fan to task, belittled his knowledge and integrity, and insisted unequivocally that anything that was signed by Bob Kane was drawn by Bob Kane.

Which just goes to prove you can't believe everyone who ought to know what they're talking about.

I know that now. I didn't know it then.

This was prior to 1964, when editorship of the Batman comics passed from Schiff to Julius Schwartz. That year, Batman stories began appearing that were inarguably drawn by the award-winning Carmine Infantino. There was no pretense that these were by Bob Kane. They weren't even signed with his name. Others were, however, and these were professedly drawn by Batman's creator. The editor even said so in the letter columns — and we all know that you can believe everything you ever read in a comic-book letters column, right?

Soon, the Batman TV show hit with a pow! and a biff! and a zap! It was a smash success, and the creator of Batman was suddenly turning up on talk shows. OK, that proved there was a Bob Kane.

But who was drawing the comics? And, for that matter, who was writing them? And why didn't they get credit?

A few years later, when we had our local comic-book club going, that was an occasional topic of discussion. Writer and artist credits were then becoming standard in comics, especially those Mr. Schwartz was editing. He had credits on all his comics. He even had them on the Elongated Man stories that ran in the back of Detective Comics. But the Batman stories in the front — and the stories in Batman's own comic book — were still signed "Bob Kane." Either that or they weren't signed at all. None of us understood this.

Then one day, one of our members walked into the Food Giant market on Westwood Boulevard. He was browsing through their comics rack when a strange man spoke to him. "You like Batman?" he asked.

The fan, whose name was Herb, told him he did.

"I created Batman," the strange man said.

Herb thought but did not say aloud, "Right — and I'm Catwoman." Bob Kane? The creator of Batman? Here in the Food Giant?

Point of View

Not in this world possible.

But, as it turned out, the man wasn't fibbing. He was Bob Kane. He invited Herb to visit him the following afternoon and said he could bring along three or four of the local comics fans. I was among that three or four.

The creator of Batman was living in a very nice rented apartment on Wilshire Boulevard, about a quarter-mile from UCLA, just barely within walking distance of my home. We all brought along vintage Batman comics from our collections, and I also packed the then-current issue, which was Batman #204. It was dated August 1968, so this would have been maybe three months before that. I had that issue along, because it had something in it I'd never seen before in any comic book starring The Caped Crusader.

It had credits.

We spent a wonderful afternoon with Mr. Kane, and he indulged us in all sorts of silly questions about comic books and Batman and The Joker and Alfred the Butler. Some he could answer, some he couldn't. He didn't seem particularly up on recent stories, including those he'd ostensibly illustrated, whereas we knew them by heart.

It took a while, but I finally mustered up the courage to ask him about the different art styles. (Why was any mustering required? Because I was this geeky 16-year-old kid and he was Bob Kane, creator of Batman. That's why.)

He wasn't wild about my question but he responded, sort of, explaining that, like all cartoonists, he had a number of assistants. As he said this, he paged through a vintage Detective Comics that one of us had brought along and said, "This is Dick Sprang's work. He's an incredible artist. Just amazing."

I knew a fair amount about comic-book history back then. Still, that was the first time I ever heard the name Dick Sprang. I don't think it had ever been printed in any comic book or any fanzine or anywhere, at least not in conjunction with The Caped Crusader. Everything was signed "Bob Kane."

Irv Novick had just taken over drawing the Batman comic book, and I mentioned him. Mr. Kane looked startled. "How do you know about Irv Novick?" he asked.

I held out the current issue and showed him the credits. It said right there that the issue had been drawn by Irv Novick and Joe Giella. Mr. Kane took the comic book from me and stared at it for what seemed like a long time.

I didn't know it at that moment but I was witnessing a historic moment: the first time Bob Kane ever saw someone else's name on a Batman story.

As I later learned, he had recently renegotiated his contract with DC. The new terms no longer mandated the fiction that every Batman tale was his work, so, that very month, proper credits began appearing on Batman stories. I don't know if Kane knew they were coming or if he was simply unprepared to see them in print, but he stared at that page of Batman #204, then he looked at me. Then he looked at the credit again. Then he asked, almost accusingly, "Why does it matter to you who drew the story?"

I stammered, "Because some Batman stories are great and some aren't. And if you read a story and you love it, you'd like to know who did it. I'd like to know when I'm really getting Bob Kane and when I'm getting an imitation."

He glared at me like I'd said something very, very wrong. So I kept babbling on, hoping something would emerge that would get me out of trouble. Finally, something did. (And I apologize in advance for the following analogy; I was 16 at the time and nervous ...)

"It's like ... well, Rembrandt had artists who assisted him. If you were looking at your favorite Rembrandt, you'd want to know if it was by him or one of his assistants."

That pleased him. He asked, "So it wouldn't disappoint you to know that a certain Batman story wasn't by me?"

"Well, I've guessed they aren't all by you. I recognized Jim Mooney's work on some of them —"

"How do you know Jim Mooney?"

I told him, "I know Jim Mooney because he drew Supergirl for many years. So I know his style and he signed a lot of those stories. Also, he just started working on Spider-Man for Marvel, and all those stories have credits."

"So it matters to you who drew the story?"

"Sure — the same way it matters to me who created my favorite characters. If it didn't matter to me, I wouldn't have wanted to meet Bob Kane."

Mr. Kane smiled — and I felt that I was no longer in trouble.

One of our group had brought along a tape recorder to snag an interview for his fanzine. Kane remembered the machine was taking down his every utterance and said to me, "You said you want to be a writer, right? Well, let me read something you've written. Then you come over some time, and I'll give you some advice and, while you're here, I'll give you a real answer to your question about assistants."

I got the message: He'd answer my question — but not while the tape recorder was running.

We all left that day with stars — or maybe bat-signals — in our eyes. Mr. Kane asked us if we'd trade the vintage issues of Batman we'd brought along for original drawings, and we all said yes. One member of our expedition was shocked that the creator and artist of Batman didn't own a complete set of all the comics on which he'd supposedly worked. "None of us ever thought to save these things," Kane said. "I can't believe what they're selling for, these days." At the time, one could pick up a decent copy of Batman #1 for around $300, which seemed like all the money in the world.

I got a nice sketch of The Penguin, and another in our party, Mark Grossman, got a Batman drawing. Later, he sold it to me, since it was signed, "To Mark..." — which severely limited its marketability. Our host also gave us all autographed photos of himself, including one of him waving from the TV Batmobile.

A few days later, I dropped off at his building an envelope containing several stories I'd written. And a few days after that, I went back to see him again, this time with no other fans along — and no tape recorder. Mr. Kane sat me down, poured himself a vodka, and started telling me his life story.

I abhor invasions of privacy and spying. Still, I wish the FBI guys who wired up Linda Tripp had been able to plant a microphone on me before that visit. Next week in this spot, I'll tell you as much as I can recall of what he told me that afternoon, supplemented by 30 years of research since.

But I won't leave you dangling about his reaction to the writing samples I'd delivered.

Before I left that day, Mr. Kane gave me a 30-second critique of my work. Basically, in so many words, he said that I should forget about becoming a professional writer, because my work showed no sign of talent.

As of next summer, I'll have been writing professionally for 30 years without one day of unemployment. But from time to time — like last night, on page 70 of a script that is, so far, devoid of plot — I've paused to wonder if maybe Bob Kane wasn't right.

GENE COLAN CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL

A Six Week Personal Tutorial Workshop

Courses Offered ⋆Anatomy ⋆Perspective ⋆Characterization (Faces) ⋆Scene Setting ⋆ Story Telling ⋆Cartooning

⋆⋆Or Chart Your Own Course⋆⋆

Select the courses you want to tackle...

These Workshops are completely individualized with only myself guiding you. (There will be no substitute/adject teachers).

To begin, you will receive assignments from me covering the "track" of your choice. During the six weeks, you mail me the assignments as you complete them with transparent overlays. I will correct, enhance and instruct. This method will allow you to keep what you have done, yet you can see clearly by my drawing on the overlay what you need to develop. My comments will be in the margins.

This method will allow you to work towards your personal best for as long as you need, yet you can set it aside and move on to the next week's assignment, knowing you can at any time return to your previous projects. You'll even be able to move on to the next course so that you can have a sense of overall accomplishment in a relatively brief time. Taking all six courses takes no more than thirty-six weeks and they can be broken up with as much time as you need to take between courses. My interest is to offer as much flexibility to the individual artist within a reasonable structure.

Syllabus on request or check my website: www.genecolan.com; Begin when you're ready. Payment in full prior to first session. Six week course $500 + $100 for Fed. Ex. mailings.

⋆Charting your own course means you may already have areas you know require strengthening or areas of particular interest...submit to me (for pre-approval) an outline of what you'd like to tackle over a six-week period of time. I would love to help you.

GOLDEN AGE COMICS FOR SALE!

KEY BOOKS! LOW GRADE AND AFFORDABLE!

ALL SELECT #1 G - $800.00. F+ front cover; back cover had 1¾" x 1½" piece replacement. Fix it professionally and have a $3000.00 copy!
ADVENTURE #61 FR-G $775.00 (1st Starman!). Looks G+ but trimmed.
BLUE RIBBON #9 G- $165.00. (1st Mr. Justice). Scarce. Resto to spine.
CAPTAIN AMERICA #16 Poor $150.00. G- covers. Brittle, incomplete interior. (Or sell me your cuvedess one!).
CAPTAIN AMERICA #67 G- $145.00 Upper spine corner replaced on F&B cover. Unimpressive, but a cheap filler.
DAREDEVIL BATTLES HITLER #1 No cover $175.00. Spine works on 1st wrap, otherwise nice.
EXCITING #14 No covers $15.00. 2½" x 1¼" piece off 1st wrap at bottom.
HUMAN TORCH #4 (SUMMER) G- $250 00. Looks G-VG, but small triangular piece (¼" x ½") off all interior pages. Also color touch-up along spine. Still impressive!
MARVEL MYSTERY #19 No CF $100.00. Otherwise G-VG.
MARVEL MYSTERY #29 G $150.00. Trimmed. Small replacement on cover.
MORE FUN #55 No CF $300.00. (1st Dr.Fate) Otherwise Fair, taped spine.
MORE FUN #67 G- $600 00. (Origin Dr. Fate). Radical printers error! Front cover colors are "off" by ¼". This makes the cover look psychedelic! This copy may be one-of-a-kind! Other collectibles, such as stamps consider this type of defect desirable. Which would have a positive impact on its value!
MYSTERY MEN #2 G- $225.00. Quarter-size piece out of margin through second half of book.
SHOWCASE #4 No covers $190.00. (1st Silver Age Flash). Color fade on 1st wrap, with some pieces out.
THUNDA #1 FR $75.00. (The only all-Frazetta comic!). Beat but complete.

An EVEN LONGER time ago

in a galaxy far, far away and coming to a comics shop near you: Dark Horse tips CBG readers to plans leading up to Star Wars: The Phantom Menace

"We need to be very cautious, but that also doesn't mean we won't be taking risks."

— Peet Janes, Star Wars line editor

By Matt Brady

After expanding the boundaries of the Star Wars universe in comic-book form for the past few years and successfully beating challengers to the license last year, Dark Horse's Star Wars plans call for staying the course in early 1999. From January through early May, the publisher will continue to extrapolate characters and events from the original trilogy in works like Boba Fett: Enemy of the Empire, Vader's Quest, a new Crimson Empire mini-series, and the continued manga adaptation of The Empire Strikes Back. All that changes with the mid-May shipping of The Phantom Menace adaptation.

The tie-ins. Rather than a single movie adaptation special, Dark Horse will release two Phantom Menace projects.

Star Wars Editor Peet Janes said, "The first project will be a straight adaptation of the film, written by Henry Gilroy, pencilled by Rodolfo Damaggio, and inked by Al Williamson with colors by Dave Nestelle and covers by Hugh Fleming.

"The other Episode 1 project will be four single-issue tie-in comics that will explore the four main characters, each issue created by a separate creative team. We'll be releasing the complete list of creators as soon as everybody is contracted, but be prepared for some big surprises.

"Both the adaptation and the tie-ins will be released in May and June 1999. Naturally, a project of this significance should and does receive a special amount of care and promotion, but, as far as being the crown jewels of our '99 projects, I prefer to get the full year's material out there and let the readers decide."

Lucas sets the limits. From the adaptation and four specials, Dark Horse plans to follow its current Star Wars course and explore the world surrounding Episode I as well as its current, classic-era Star Wars. However, there will be a few constraints. Since Dark Horse landed the rights to Star Wars long after Return of the Jedi had left theaters, creators had nearly the entire Star Wars timeline in which to tell stories, only the Lucas-defined prequel period relegated as absolutely off limits. Now, however, only one movie of the upcoming prequel trilogy will be out as source material, a fact that will slightly curtail the publishers' storytelling latitude.

For Janes, this means that later '99 Star Wars prequel-based projects are still up in the air. "We're going to have to change our pace for a while," Janes said. "Series embellishing the films as they emerge will be the high points of our prequel-era publishing plan. Between the film releases, we will doubtless feature other series that embellish the prequel era — and at the same time we'll continue to publish projects based on the classic era. Continuity is critically important to the maintenance of Star Wars as a viable property, so it's in everybody's best interests to allow Lucasfilm to come up with the stuff first, and then we can play with it."

Despite the fact that several of Dark Horse's most successful Star Wars titles were set between or following the original films, Janes said he realizes and is content with the fact that, for now, their playground is limited to The Phantom Menace, classic-era Star Wars, and stories of the ancient Jedi past, due to the risk of stepping on storylines from the upcoming Episode 2. "Bridging projects, like 1996's Shadows of the Empire, can't rightly be created until we have the other side to anchor the bridge on," Janes explained.

"However, we do have several prequel-era projects planned. As for exactly who will get follow-ups, reader response, rather than our feelings right now, will tell us who or what we need to expand upon — but it's hard to predict the future. I'm sure that licensees who manufactured millions of dollars' worth of plush Ewok dolls after Return of the Jedi were predicting that fans would snatch them up, but they didn't.

"We need to be very cautious, but that also doesn't mean we won't be taking risks. We'll just be taking risks that Lucasfilm gives us the go-ahead on. Sometimes Lucasfilm will dispense material to us to exploit, and other times we will propose projects and make our argument for why we feel they should be done."

While full-blown explorations of characters and situations may slightly curtailed for a while, Janes insisted that Dark Horse's Star Wars prequel-era series won't shy away from other characters or hinting that what comics fans are reading is just a piece in a very broad picture. "Sharp readers can always pull little details out of what we publish and can often figure out a lot through context," Janes said. "We'll coordinate our efforts with other licensees for the novels, games, and other projects to paint a broad mural for fans. Some details, like the battle droids, will become regular parts of our projects. Other, more specific details and character explorations will have to come from the source itself first."

The ongoing series. One lateral Phantom Menace-era arena that figures heavily in Dark Horse's 1999 plans is the ongoing

Trailer talk

The Star Wars: The Phantom Menace (one keeps wanting to say "Fandom Menace") trailer started in theaters Nov. 17, and parts of it appeared in other venues — Siskel & Ebert, the infotainment shows, the Internet (gee, how'd that happen?) soon afterward.

While not of a mind to spoil the trailer for anyone (by itself, a strange concept), I'll share two principal observations: First, the major role that children play in the storyline, beyond being commercially very savvy, brought the realization of the total absence of children from the original trilogy. Apart from some young Ewoks, we've never seen any kids in the films before (happily ignoring the Ewok TV movies and Star Wars Holiday Special). That fact alone makes the series' resonance with children even more remarkable.

Second, and only we'd notice this: Liam Neeson's sidekick, an odd flop-eared alien, immediately brought to mind Jax, the goofy green rabbit from Marvel's earliest Star Wars stories and the only character Lucasfilm ever banned from the comics!

Star Wars series, the first since Marvel's series, which began more than 20 years ago. Rather than focus on familiar aspects of the original Star Wars universe or an extrapolation taken directly from The Phantom Menace, the new series is set on a rim world of the Star Wars universe and follows the exploits of a family-man Jedi Knight, Ki-Adi-Mundi.

For Janes and Dark Horse, the choice to tell the story of Mundi was based on the reasoning that Lucasfilm was only granting ongoing story pieces of The Phantom Menace universe to publishers. "When Lucasfilm parceled out certain elements of the prequel era to licensees, we determined that we would make the most of whatever we were fortunate enough to receive," Janes said. "The challenge, then, becomes taking that element and making it the Star Wars that fans know and love. Ki-Adi-Mundi was what we received, so it falls to us to make his adventures exciting, informative, and compelling.

"At the same time, we continue to deliver the instantly recognizable story elements that made Star Wars great in the first place: action and drama peppered with humor and pathos, the hero's journey, a sense of greater history lurking just off-screen, and all those cool gadgets and mind-boggling environments."

Multiple timelines. All the upcoming Star Wars projects aren't without a slight downside, however: For Janes, the looming prequel continuity now means two Star Wars timelines to keep distinct and coherent. While Lucasfilm has final say on all Dark Horse Star Wars projects, Janes still has to stay on top of it all.

At times, it can be dicey. "Everything must fit together — Dark Horse and its fellow licensees owe that to both Lucasfilm and the fans," Janes said. "However, retrofitting the classic era to include the history of the prequel era — or foreshadowing the classic era in prequel-era titles — must be done with great care, lest it appear artificial. Eventually, we'll have a stunning, generations-long continuity, but that's going to take some time, so I would advise readers and general Star Wars fans to be patient."

While everyone knows editors are supposed to maintain some level of impartiality regarding the projects they are overseeing, Janes throws impartiality out the window when asked if he has a favorite upcoming project. "It has to be Vader's Quest," Janes said, referring to the February-shipping mini-series that tells the tale of Darth Vader between A New Hope and Empire. "Not only has writer Darko Macan truly captured Darth Vader during what is perhaps his most tragic moment in the entire Star Wars history, but Dave Gibbons and Angus McKie have brought the story to life as an immense spectacle.

"Vader has often been relegated to the role of figurehead for evil in the comics, but this mini-series promises to give him a much more expansive and subjective coverage. I've truly enjoyed working with Darko in the past, and, having been exposed to Dave Gibbons' work way back with Watchmen, it's an honor to work with one of the greatest modern comics creators there is."

'A great responsibilty.' Along with having a favorite project, Janes also let his emotions out regarding his position as shepherd to a yet-unexplored region of Lucas' Star Wars tapestry. "It's something of a dream come true, of course, although I don't think I ever envisioned just how I would get to where I am," Janes said. "In the moments after leaving the movie theater in 1977, I told my friends and family I would someday work on Star Wars. When a goal like that is achieved, you have to treat it with reverence. Thus, I consider my current position a stewardship: a position of tremendous privilege and great responsibility."

A veritable galaxy of comics

Lots of Star Wars comics are coming from Dark Horse in the months before the release of the new movie. Here's an advance look at some of them:

✷ Star Wars: Vader's Quest #1, shipping Feb. 17, follows Vader's search for the pilot who blew up the Death Star. (Yeah, Marvel did, too, but this one's canon.)

✷ Star Wars: Boba Fett: Enemy of the Empire starts in January (#2, below, ships Feb. 24) and pits Fett against the henchmen of an untrusting Darth Vader.

✷ Star Wars: Jedi Academy – Leviathan concludes in January with #4. Paul Chadwick drew the cover for the Kevin J. Anderson story.

✷ Star Wars: Crimson Empire II #3 ships in January. Mike Richardson, Randy Stradley, Paul Gulacy, and Randy Emberlin continue the six-issue post-Jedi tale of political intrigue.

✷ Star Wars: Mara Jade: By The Emperor's Hand #6 ships in January, concluding writer Michael Stackpole's mini-series based on the character from Timothy Zahn's Heir to the Empire novels.

Unknown adventures, Forbidden adventures, and the adventures of a fat little nothing

"An ordinary day turns into a thing of thrilling, amazing drama!" — from the cover of Forbidden Worlds #91 (Oct 60)

Among the stories being reprinted by Roger Broughton under his ACG imprint are the adventures of Nemesis, Mark Midnight, The Fat Fury, John Force Magic Agent, and Magic Man.

When I was a lad of 9 to 12 years of age, The American Comics Group, better known as ACG, published the sort of comic books I didn't buy on a regular basis. Yet, every now and then, I would have a particularly good day of collecting old pop bottles and, glass fortune in hand, augment my purchases of DC titles with an issue of Adventures into the Unknown, Forbidden Worlds, or the youngest of the trio, Unknown Worlds.

That changed around 1964 or so, when ACG added Herbie to its publication schedule and the super-heroes Magicman and Nemesis to mainstays Adventures and Forbidden. Of course, by that time, I was heavy into the Marvel super-heroes and, wanting more of the same, would buy just about any comic book featuring Spandex-clad characters. It was an exciting time for a young comics fan, and I retain to this day an inexplicable fondness for even the least of the super-heroes who shared the newsstands of the day.

Herbie Popnecker, that little fat nothing who was secretly one of the most powerful beings in the universe; is a classic. But, although Herbie was the best creation of ACG and its prolific editor-writer Richard E. Hughes, the company produced hundreds of comic books from 1948 to 1967.

Michael Vance has attempted to preserve and honor the memories of both ACG and Hughes in Forbidden Adventures: The History of the American Comics Group (Greenwood Press, $52.50). It's not an easy book to come by, given its high price and limited distribution, but I was able to borrow a copy from the Medina County District Library through its loan arrangement with the larger Cleveland Metropolitan Library. I do so love my hometown library.

Vance has done an incredible job laying out the history of ACG from its beginnings (as a shop supplying comics material to other publishers) through its final newsstand releases. A sister company continued to produce custom comics for another 10 years after the last issues of AitU, FW, UW, and the short-lived Gasp!

Especially welcome were Vance's depictions of the founders, editors, and creators of the ACG comics. The recollections of Assistant Editor Norman Fruman — and artists like Al Williamson and Kurt Schaffenberger — make it clear that Hughes was a dedicated, respected, and much-loved editor. Their comments complete the picture of Hughes as seen in his honest and sometimes cantankerous letters columns of the 1960s. If so many of ACG's "heroes" were everyday men and women, it's because Hughes was very much a down-to-earth individual himself.

The histories of ACG and Hughes contain a number of impressive achievements. Hughes was the creator of such popular super-heroes as Fighting Yank, Black Terror, Pyroman, and Super-Mouse. Although it was not the first horror comic book, Adventures into the Unknown was the first regularly published horror comics, predating the E.C. comics by more than a year. The first issue of AitU was written by the noted fantasy and science-fiction author Frank Belknap Long.

Other ACG contributors made marks for themselves both in and out of the comics field. Assistant Editor Norman Fruman won $48,000 on The $64,000 Question and went into teaching. Writer and novelist Al Vorpan was a distinguished member of the Jewish Anti-Defamation League. Raymond Everett Kinstler painted the portraits of several American presidents. Artist Harry Lazurus holds many patents as an inventor and illustrated children's books. Patricia Highsmith wrote Strangers on a Train, which was subsequently filmed by Alfred Hitchcock.

Despite my considerable admiration for this book and Vance's scholarship, I have to take him to task for once more putting into print the misinformation that ACG artist Kenneth Landau and actor Martin Landau are one of the same. They're not. This is an error that keeps being repeated, no matter how often Mark Evanier, other comics historians, and Landau himself correct it. If there is ever a second edition of Forbidden Adventures, I hope Vance expunges this fallacy as thoroughly as humanly possible.

Reading Vance's book inspired me to trek down to my basement and the boxes of unread (or un-reread) comics I have acquired over the years. I found several issues of Forbidden Worlds, the fruits of a trade with dealer Jeff Bruce of Cincinnati. The earliest was FW #91 (Oct 60). The last one I read before realizing that I had to stop reading comic books and write this column was FW #103 (May-Jun 62). Like many DC titles of the era, Forbidden Worlds was published eight times a year.

(We interrupt this column to report that Spoiler Warnings have been sighted in the reading area. These warnings are expected to remain in place until the end of this column. Thank you.)

The quote beginning this column is a good summation of the ACG "style" of story-telling. The Ogden Whitney cover — he and Kurt Schaffenberger were ACG's cover guys — introduced "Bud's Birthday Presents." The interior story was written by "Shane O'Shea" (one of several ACG house names and likely representing a script by Editor Hughes) and drawn by Paul Reinman. It's a pretty simple story in which Bud, a science-minded boy, uses the science-minded gifts he received from his parents to thwart an invasion of Earth by alien conquerors. Although marred by Reinman's inability to keep Bud's face consistently young — the kid looks to be in his 30s here and there — "Bud's Birthday Presents" is a pleasant story.

Most of these ACG anthology tales fall into the "OK" range. Their heroes are "ordinary" human beings: a photographer seeking a remarkable lens, a soldier in the heat of battle, an unscrupulous businessman, a rich man whose hobby is all things medieval, a girl-crazy teen-ager, a police detective, and so on. When the heroes are somewhat removed from the ordinary, they are still familiar types: an eccentric inventor or a cruel commissar. Even a visitor from the future was portrayed as meek and mundane, not very different from the contemporary characters in the story.

However, there were outstanding stories in these issues. There are two such efforts in Forbidden Worlds #93 (Jan-Feb 61): "The Eggbeater in the Sky" and "Food for Thought."

In "Eggbeater," Seymour Drudd is a mechanical genius with a wacky streak. He plows the fortune he makes from designing household gadgets into building an eggbeater-shaped spaceship for an unmanned expedition to Venus. The ship successfully travels to Venus and back, bringing with it your basic alien fauna and flora. However, since the scientific community considers Drudd's ship to be a joke, no one will even look at his evidence. Drudd abandons his farm — and the samples — to return to his household gadgets.

"What a pity, dear," Drudd says to his wife. "Now it may be centuries before man knows what the surface of Venus looks like!" The ominous narrator begs to differ: "That's what he thinks! For back on the abandoned farm, the macabre Venusian lifeforms have engulfed the swamp and are spreading over the farm, swiftly, inexorably! And before long, mankind may discover exactly what the surface of Venus looks like ..."

What made this story work so well was the cartoony art of Pete Costanza. It's so deceptively cheerful, even in his depiction of those Venusian lifeforms, that it's a shock when the cartoony creatures start to chow down on birds, rabbits, and everything else within reach. The critters are drawn no differently than they were earlier in the tale, and, of course, there is no gore, but the sight makes for a truly scary tale.

"Food for Thought" concerns a young man raised from birth to be a superman — discovering his advanced abilities have condemned him to a life of loneliness. The story is drawn by Harry Lazurus, who really brings home the emotional highs and lows of the script. There was no writer credit on the story.

The ACG titles of this era are also notable for the frank and sometimes contentious letters columns presided over by Hughes. He wasn't afraid to disagree with his readers, even when they praised stories he felt were substandard. I've never seen letters columns quite like these but I get a kick out of them.

ACG comics of this era are worth seeking out in the back-issue bins. Save for the remarkable Herbie, good reading copies of these comics can be found for a couple bucks apiece. Each issue features three or four complete stories — about 26 pages or so — which I think is solid value for the cost.

If you can't find the old ACG comics, keep an eye out for the titles being published by Roger Broughton's modern version of ACG. Broughton purchased the rights to ACG comics (and some Charlton material) some time ago and has been publishing a series of one-shots reprinting same. These black-and-white comics aren't as good as the originals, but they're still great fun. Your retailer can order them through Previews.

As for Forbidden Adventures itself, it's a terrific piece of work. At 50 bucks, the book is likely too expensive for all but the most avid — and well-heeled — comics fans, but, if you can get it through your local library, it's definitely worth reading. Kudos to Michael Vance and Greenwood Press.

By Maggie Thompson

At the San Diego con this summer, Dark Horse had a copy of an incredible work. The culmination of a project occupying years of research was slipped into the hands of an assortment of critics for a fast look (a mouth-watering moment) and then it was gone, amid pledges that it would "soon" arrive from the overseas printer. Comics between the Panels by Steve Duin and Mike Richardson (1998, Dark Horse, ISBN 1-56971-344-8, $49.95) has finally arrived, and it is a rich compendium of fact and opinion — and games.

Games? You've had the chance to play one of its entertainments in Dark Horse's ads for the $49.95 tome. Check out, for example, the back cover of CBG #1297. There, in full cover, is the front cover of the book — and the game, of course, is to identify the comic-book cover from which each letter of the alphabet was taken. (Here's a start: Action, Boy, and Crime Does Not Pay. Amusingly, experimentation has shown that many participants founder on the recent titles.) It's only one of the diversions in this work which is destined to become a cornerstone of the collections of devoted comics buffs.

Edited by Jackie Estrada, the hardcover is packed with marvelous photos of people who have moved and shaken the comics field over the decades — and there's a vivacious helping of personal opinion to lighten the tone to that of delicious entertainment. Taking one entry in detail, where else could you find nearly a full page (including a photo!) about Carol Kalish, one of the most important people the field ever lost?

The Kalish entry does indicate a flaw, one which bedevils anyone who's ever tried to do a detailed reference work on the field or put together any examination of any complex topic with a personal approach: Authors, being human, are necessarily limited, even in such an unlimited volume as this. Kalish, for example, was an incredibly complex genius who overcame dyslexia, a stammer, and professional opposition — emerging as the supportive, nurturing voice of Marvel to its retailers. Yet the commentary is limited to two voices. As a result, one response to this and other entries is to wish the content had been checked with even more sources for input. And, in some cases, correction. (It should be made clear here that I grind an ax out of friendship with Richard Howell and Carol — and my brother, Carol's assistant in her last years.)

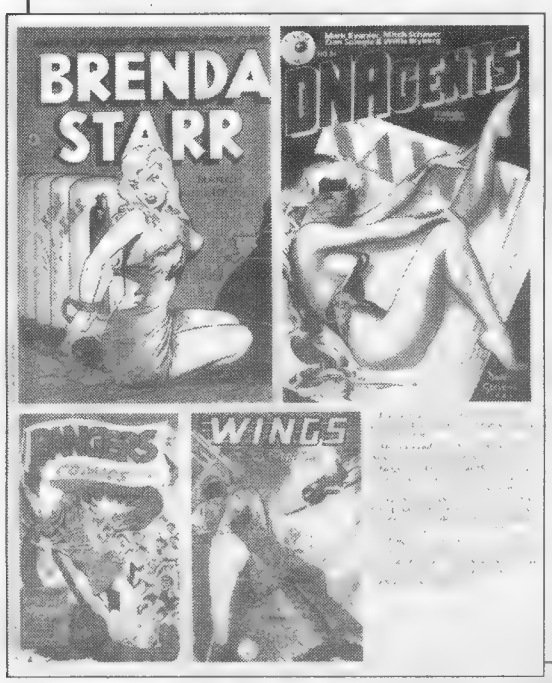
But realize the book already packs a full ream of paper chock-a-block full of unusual and illuminating anecdotes and quotations and samples and insights! And look at its richness. And, of course, readers will enjoy finding the opinions are barbed and provocative. A small sample of Batman #8 accompanies the entry for "infinity covers," which opines that hardly anyone cares about them any more. In the entry for "Image" is Frank Miller's thanks to the company: "Because of Image Comics, artists enjoy new opportunities and are paid better, even at Marvel Comics."

Dip into this book anywhere and you'll find yourself sucked into entry after entry, responding emotionally and often finding out something you didn't know — or hadn't realized. Look at the page reproduced here, its topic "headlights." The entry includes a full column on the facing page, with an essay on busty pin-ups featured on so many comics old and new and a list of the authors' 10 favorite headlights covers. (These are from 1946, 1948, and 1985, each with annotation and credits.)

You'll find such tidbits from history as: the canny business move that made Eerie #1 a black-and-white pamphlet; a side to Wendy Pini you may never have seen; a list of E.C.'s Pic-to-Fiction magazines, including a color shot of the rarest of them all; a list of creator suicides; an amusing spread of title changes (Black Hood became Laugh with #20).

And you'll find eye-catchers: "Forty years on, [Fredric Wertham] more closely resembles a patron saint than the angel of death." "Many fans consider [Joe] Sinnott to have been Jack Kirby's best inker." "The most [Carl] Barks ever got paid for a page of story and art was $45.50."

Its price is amazingly low for its content — and the print run is also pretty low — so get this on your holiday gift list as soon as possible. It offers hours of entertainment, a collector's item worthy of the name.



By Maggie Thompson

↳There are other books you'll want to consider for holiday giving — and getting.

Consider the hardcover The Birthday of the Infanta by Oscar Wilde, illustrated by P. Craig Russell (1998, NBM, ISBN 1-56163-213-9, $15.95). It's Russell's usual rich, confident art coupled with Wilde's cynicism for a rewarding blend, the third of these from NBM. (Though promoted as a way to get kids excited about reading, kids will need parents to read it with them; it's a grim story.)

↳And here's a true collector's treat for the season: For $80 (Californians add 40¢ sales tax) to Mark J. Cohen, P.O. Box 1892-B, Santa Rosa, CA 95402, there's still time to get a 1966 first edition of The Cartoonist Cookbook. It's from a newly discovered cache of a true gem, and all proceeds will go to benefit The Cartoon Research Library at Ohio State University, one of the top research centers for our field. Most of the book is devoted to the cartoonists and their cartoons, with a discussion of the menus of their choice — but there are clear recipes for the menus, if you want to pursue them.

Neal Adams is here, accompanied by a sample of his Ben Casey art (which is what people knew him for in 1966). Milton Caniff offers a recipe for boa constrictor filet. Charles Schulz offers a pancake recipe, and Dik Browne provides Tuna Fish Wiggle. This is a gift bound to surprise and please the recipient — and maybe even feed him or her.

↳If you're looking for a gift for someone who's deeply into a cult classic but may not be aware of comics, don't forget about Dark Horse's Buffy the Vampire Slayer #1 (1998, $2.95, available with gold or regular logo). A couple of short shorts have already appeared (one in TV Guide; did you notice?), but here's a complete story in an issue — and Buffy buffs should welcome it, because it combines the clever fantasy of the show with the possibilities of the comics form.

It may not mean much to non-Buffy fans, but they're not the target readers, anyway. CBG readers will know scripter Andi Watson's earlier good work with Skeleton Key; art is by Joe Bennett and Rick Ketcham; and the series has to be OK'd by the Buffy folks, so it's entertaining and true to the show. The audience for this one could grow fast.

The following comics were scheduled to ship approximately 30 or more days ago; however, we have not been able to confirm that they have actually been released, nor, as far as we have been able to determine, have they been rescheduled. If you have any of the issues listed below, please let us know. We'd especially appreciate it if you could include the information we need to list the comic book in the CBG Price Guide. From the indicia of the comic book: The publisher, full title, issue number, month, and year, as well as the U.S. price given on the cover.

This section features listings for retail comics stores around the world. Traveling comics collectors of all types search for new stores to dig through on their vacations, business trips, etc. Advertise your establishment here, including approximately ten words of miscellaneous description, for only $3.50 an issue. You can buy this space in increments of 26 or 52 issues, for $91.00 or $182.00 respectively. Send in your store name, address, phone number, and approximately ten words of description, along with your payment. If you stock Comics Buyer's Guide we'll put your listing in boldface type.

☐ 1 year $182.00 (52 issues) ☐ 6 months $91.00 (26 issues)

Send your listing with payment to: Comics Buyer's Guide 700 E. State St., Iola, WI 54990-0001 or call 715-445-2214

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $41.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $41.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($41.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

if you collect it – you'll find it

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last-minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.
B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Novus.
C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.
D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.
E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.
F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.
G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from longhand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.
H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.
I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.
J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.
K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.
L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.
M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.
N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.
O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.
P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.
Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.
R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.
S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectional for any reason.

What are you thankful for?

As we roll into Thanksgiving, I would like to take stock and be aware of those things for which I am really thankful ...

First and foremost, I'm thankful for my family. When my marriage fell apart, all I could think of was parks and play areas in fast-food restaurants. The reason those came to mind was because, on weekends, those are the domains of the single father.

You can always see him there, sitting and looking wistful, watching his daughter on the monkey bars — or perhaps he's behind his son and pushing him on the swing. You could discern the single dad, based on a passing comment exchanged between him and his child or by the absence of the wedding ring. As a secure, happily married man, I would always feel a degree of melancholy looking upon such moments. Poor devil, I would think, desperately trying to stay relevant to his child's life, squeezing in an entire lifetime of fatherhood into every other weekend. Thank God I don't have to worry about such things.

In Judaism, you're not supposed to think (and certainly not speak) such things. It tempts the Evil Eye. That's why you're supposed to look at a newborn and say, "Oy, what an ugly child," so as not to attract the notice of the Eye. If someone does inadvertently comment on a child's beauty, you're supposed to quickly say, "Pooh pooh pooh." This will theoretically ward off the Eye, although I'm never been entirely certain why the rapid utterance of the word "pooh" should affect the Eye in such a manner. Perhaps the Evil Eye has an extreme aversion to A.A. Milne — a sort of supernatural Constant Reader, as it were.

Well, I had the poor judgment not only to think it, but I may have even uttered it on occasion. And the next thing I knew, I was — well, not in the same boat, but I was standing on the pier and listening to them shout, "All ashore that's going ashore."

Aside from all the personal, emotional turmoil, my greatest fear was that I would become incidental and irrelevant to my children's lives. That there would even be resentment and anger from them.

Thankfully and fortunately, that has not been the case. Suffice to say that the kids have not been lost to me, and we remain close, and I haven't been relegated to the legion of weekend dads on the park benches.

Which is not in any way intended to insult, demean, or undercut the weekend fathers. I know that I'm extremely lucky to have dodged that particular bullet, and my sympathies go out to all of you who did, indeed, get hit with that particular slug between the eyes.

So I'm thankful for my children, Shana, Gwen, and Ariel. And I'm also thankful for my sister, Beth, who has been a tremendous source of inspiration, wisdom and advice. We saw each other only intermittently over the past years, but the crashing and burning of my marriage — and some difficulties she ran into, as well — brought us closer together and solidified a sibling bond that was never really there before, even back in the days, when, y'know, Mom and Dad liked her best.

I'm also thankful for my girlfriend, Kathleen. A fine, Irish lass who towers about three inches over me, which is great, because it means that, when we're at conventions together, I can take refuge behind her. The kids adore her, as do I, and she has brought a wonderful influence to life here at casa David.

She accompanied me to a convention in Mexico (which I'll be writing about next issue) and handled everything that was thrown at her with grace and good humor — including when the convention organizers put her on a panel. I'll never forget when she said to me, looking slightly shell-shocked, "They've got me on a panel."

"Oh? On what? Puppetry? Theater arts?" Those are two of her expertises.

"No. It's 'Wives of Comic-Book Creators.' "

"But we're not married," I said, glancing at my hand to make sure that a ring hadn't materialized onto it from an alternate dimension.

"Yes, I know. I explained that to them. They said they didn't care."

Well, whatever. In any event, Kathleen helped me land on my feet, and for that I'm thankful.

I'm also thankful for the close friends who were there for me during the worst period of my life. The ones who listened to me breaking down for hours on the phone, complaining about everything going wrong in my life (and, in some instances, being so self-absorbed that I gave short shrift to personal crises that they themselves were enduring).

I thank them for their patience, their dedication, and their understanding. And now that I've thanked them, of course, I don't have to send out holiday greetings. Took care of it in one shot. This is way cheaper than cards and stamps.

I'm thankful for the fans. The fans who plunk down the money to buy my work and support me. I think there are some people who had formed the opinion that, because I've taken potshots at the Internet or satirized fan ire in this column (such as in the Green Lantern column) that I don't like comics and/or science-fiction fans. Nothing could be further from the truth. I am fully aware that fans are not, say, The Borg, operating with one great hive mind and acting in unison and total accord with one another.

If I complain about rude fans, I don't for a moment think that all fans are rude. The vast, vast majority are intelligent, fun, thoughtful, polite, not to mention thrifty, obedient, and cheerful. (OK, OK, not obedient. It's the Scout motto; gimme a break.)

Believe it or not, I do listen to everything that the fans say. I don't always act in accordance with their wishes, because, first of all, I have to act in accordance with my own instincts, and, second, — as noted above — fans don't think with one mind, so those very wishes are frequently in conflict with one another. (Except with the spider-clone saga, I think. Did anybody like it?)

I'm thankful for the creative giants whose work helped shape my career path. I try to bring my contributions to the field: succeed sometimes, fail other times.

But I always remain aware that I wouldn't be here if it weren't for the work of the greats whose endeavors drew my interest to comics in the first place.

Those who, thankfully, are still with us (such as Stan Lee) and those whose talent is lost to us (such as Jack Kirby). Gardner Fox, Julie Schwartz, C.C. Beck, Siegel and Shuster, Dick Giordano, Bob Kane, Jerry Robinson, Bill Finger, Joe Simon, Steve Ditko, on and on. We all of us stand on the shoulders of giants, and I remain thankful for the opportunity.

And, frankly, I'm thankful just to be here. Good people, creative people, people in far better shape than I, who have just as much reason as I to want to stick around, are gone. Carol Kalish, Mark Gruenwald, Archie Goodwin, Neal Pozner — unfortunately, that list goes on and on, too.

I'm lucky, I know that. With all the crud that's gone down in my life, I'm still lucky. I woke up this morning, conscious of the fact that most heart attacks happen first thing in the morning, and so was pleased that I sat up without ill effect.

I spent time with my daughters today and I also got to sit in front of my computer and ply my trade, being among that fairly small percentage of Americans who actually get to make a living doing something they love.

Whatever happens — at the moment, I'm thankful for a pretty good life.

Pooh pooh pooh.

Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at To Be Continued Inc., P.O. Box 239, Bayport, NY 11705. Thanks.
